Abstract

Makassar city as the capital of South Sulawesi, can not be spared from the phenomenon of poverty. The development of Makassar relatively rapidly the last few years have led to this city was the destination of migration from other cities in eastern Indonesia that has a level of development and high population density. This has implications for the increase in the number of poor people in this city. Sekaitan with it, this paper aims to present an analysis of the patterns of poverty in Makassar conducted descriptive based on information gathered through observations, interviews with informants in 100 poor households as samples taken proportionally. The results of these studies show that the poor in Makassar tend to fall into the pattern of subsistence poverty, poverty, poverty of protection and understanding, but not forming patterns of participation poverty, poverty or lack of liberties identity. The results of this paper are expected to identify the characteristics of the typology and determine patterns of urban poor groups that are highly relevant to an attempt by the government to tackle the problem of poverty.
